NEW QUESTION: 3

There are a number of ways to classify applications in order to assess business risks and assign appropriate security policies. Which of the following is not described as a primary means to classify an application?

A. by technology and/or vendor, such as .NET versus Java, and so on

B. by the user community it serves, such as HR, finance, all employees, general public, and so on

C. by the information it handles, such as classified information, personal information, publicly available information, and so on

D. by business criticality, such as revenue-generating applications versus informational applications

E. by the applicability of existing laws and regulations pertaining to privacy, auditing, and access control

Answer: A

Explanation:

Explanation/Reference:

Applications can be classified in a number of ways, such as:

* By the user community it serves, such as HR, Finance, company executives, all employees, all persons working on behalf of the company (includes contractors and temporary workers), general public, etc. (not A)

* Based on information confidentiality. Some applications process personal information while others do not.

Likewise, in military terms, an application might be targeted towards individuals with a specific level of clearance. (not B)

* Based on business criticality. Some applications may have a direct and severe contribution or impact to revenue. Examples include order processing, credit card processing, call processing, securities trading, and travel reservations. Others may have little or no impact. (not C)

* Based on the applicability of existing laws and regulations. For example, HIPPA puts more security emphasis on patient records than would otherwise exist. (not E)

* Based on network exposure. Levels might include: locked down (no network access), secure production environment access, general organization-wide intranet access, partner access, Internet access limited to a specific user community, and Internet access open to the public.

NEW QUESTION: 4

DRAG DROP

You use SQL Server Integration Services (SSIS) for extract, transformation, load (ETL) processing.

Issues concerning addresses are discovered in the data warehouse that you manage. Validation must separate the addresses into three categories:

Valid addresses

Autocorrected addresses

Invalid addresses

You need to enhance the SSIS packages to perform address validation by using an external service.

Which transformation should you use? (To answer, drag the appropriate transformation from the list of options to the correct location or locations in the answer area.)
