NEW QUESTION: 3

The management of Intelligent Semiconductor is examining the asset structure of its superconductor division, and has ascertained the following annual financial information: Invoiced sales $6,850,000 EBITA $3,525,000 Interest expense $150,000 Amortization expense $245,000 Given this information, which of the following best characterizes the Degree of Financial Leverage for this division?

- A. 1.048
- B. 1.044
- C. None of these answers is correct.
- D. 2.03
- E. .0.488

Answer: A

Explanation:

Explanation/Reference:

Explanation:

To calculate the DFL, the financial analyst needs to determine the EBIT and interest paid for a predetermined time period. To calculate the Degree of Financial Leverage, the following equation is used:

$\{EBIT/[EBIT - \text{interest paid}]\}$. In this example, EBITA is provided rather than EBIT. Thankfully, however, a figure is given for amortization expense. To determine the EBIT, subtract the amortization expense from then EBITA figure, which gives a figure of \$3,280,000 for the EBIT. The next step is to incorporate the given information into the DFL equation as follows: $\{EBIT \$3,280,000 / [EBIT \$3,280,000 - \text{interest expense } \$150,000]\}=1.048$ The Degree of Financial Leverage measures the percentage change in EPS which results from a given percentage change in EBIT. Remember that any preferred stock dividends must be incorporated into the DFL calculation, and that the DFL can never be less than one.
