NEW QUESTION: 1

Your network consists of an Active Directory domain. The domain controllers run Windows Server 2008 R2. Client computers run Windows 7.

You need to implement Encrypting File System (EFS) for all client computers.

You want to achieve this goal while meeting the following requirements:

You must minimize the amount of data that is transferred across the network when a user logs on to or off from a client computer.

Users must be able to access their EFS certificates on any client computers.

If a client computer's disk fails, EFS certificates must be accessible. What should you do?

- A. Enable roaming user profiles.
- B. Issue smart cards to all users.
- C. Enable a Data Recovery Agent.
- D. Enable credential roaming.

Answer: D

Explanation:

Explanation

Explanation/Reference: CREDENTIAL ROAMING

Credential roaming allows X.509 certificates, certificate requests, and private keys specific to a user in AD DS to be stored independently from the user profile and used on any computer on the network.

Digital certificates and private keys involve comparatively small amounts of data that need to be stored in a secure manner. Credential roaming policy provides a means for managing the use of these credentials on multiple computers in a manner that addresses the secure storage and size requirements of digital certificates and private keys. In Windows Server 2008 R2 and Windows Server 2008, credential roaming policy includes stored user names and passwords as well as certificates and keys.

Domain controllers should be running Windows Server 2003 SP1 or later (at least one running 2008 or 2008 R2). Clients used for credential roaming must also be running Windows XP SP2 or later, and Windows Server 2003 SP1 or later.
