NEW QUESTION: 1

Which of the following fraudulent activities most likely could be perpetrated due to the lack of effective internal controls in the revenue cycle?

A. Fictitious transactions are recorded that cause an understatement of revenue and overstatement of receivables.

B. Obsolete items included in inventory balances are rarely reduced to the lower of cost or market value.

C. The write-off of receivables by personnel who receive cash permits the misappropriation of cash.

D. Merchandise received is not promptly reconciled to the outstanding purchase order file.

Answer: C

Explanation:

Explanation/Reference:

Explanation:

Choice "C" is correct. The function of cash receipts is part of the treasurer's department and should be separate from the role of writing off receivables. Failure to separate the recordkeeping function from the custodial function allows an individual to misappropriate cash and then cover up the theft by writing off the related receivable balance.

Choice "A" is incorrect. Internal controls in the revenue cycle typically relate to sales, receivables, and cash, not to the purchase and receipt of goods.

Choice "B" is incorrect. Internal controls in the revenue cycle typically relate to sales, receivables, and cash, not to inventory valuation.

Choice "D" is incorrect. If fictitious transactions in the revenue cycle are recorded, then the impact on revenues and receivables would be the same; either both would be overstated (the most likely case) or both would be understated.
